GMA: Mum's the word

In Tokyo presscon, she refuses to talk politics. Period

By TJ Burgois

HER ALLIES HAVE BEEN SAYING IT FOR HER over and over. But now it comes straight from the horse's mouth: She's not talking about her political plans. Period.

Even in Japan before a different audience, it was mum's the word for President Maunagalli Arroyo on what she intends to do in 2010, when her term ends.

Ms. Arroyo faced two senior Japanese reporters and a Filipino reporter on the last day of her four-day visiting visit to Japan yesterday morning, but pointedly questioned anything but post-presidency plans.

"I don't want to talk politics. I don't want to talk about elections," she said, merely when asked about her purported plans to again seek public office in the May 2010 elections, where national politics including the presidency are at stake.

But she declared that she would not stop the polls, scheduling her statement at the launch of the new administration workday Labor Kampi-CMD on May 20 at the Manila Hotel.

"We are run out to scrap elections," she said in response to a question about ongoing moves to amend the Philippine Constitution.

Speculation has peaked that Ms. Arroyo intends to seek a term at the House representing her home province of Pangasinan, particularly after her older son, the incumbent representative, said he would yield to her despite his "heart" wanting a third term.

The purported plan is said to be a shock for Ms. Arroyo to shake

THE WAY IT WAS And still is, nearly a year ago today with this tragedy's largest anniversary on the loss of the 853 passengers and crew who perished in the sinking of Subicpo Lines' Princess of the Stars. Most of the bodies of the victims have not been found. Of the 586 on board only 11 survived.

Unsinkable moms: Some have not told children their dads dead

By Kristine L. Alave

"OUR CHILDREN ASK ME when he's coming back. I don't tell them that their father is dead because I haven't seen his body yet."

A year after the Princess of the Stars tragedy, Lorraine Labajo still cannot tell her children about the loss of their father.

Lorraine's husband, Jonathan, was one of the passengers who perished when the ferry, owned by the Subicpo Lines, sank in a typhoon exactly a year ago today.

For some of the families of the dead and missing from the Princess of the Stars tragedy, all that remains of their loved ones are a few scattered memories and their unquenchable memories.

Jonathan's body has not been recovered but remnants of his life were found washed ashore in Mindanao province, two days after the vessel capsized off Subicwan Island, Romblon, on June 21, 2008.

"It hurts that his body has not been recovered yet, that until now, he's still missing," Lorraine said.

Jonathan was a musician. A week before the tragedy he left his home in Cebu to search for his contract in Manila. But since he was told that his departure was still a month away, he decided to return to his family, Lorraine said.

"We are poor. We depended on him and he had a lot of dreams. He wanted our child to go to finish school. He said he wanted them to take any course they wanted to college," she said.

Talk of the Town

Measuring the size of crowds

By Dave and Tapping

About the size of a crowd at a big celebration, there are usually as many estimates as there are organizers trying to get the estimate.

At the Ayala rally on June 10 against a House resolution seeking to exempt a commercial satellite (Luna-6) to exempt the Chaves, we had estimates ranging from a low of 9,000 from the Philippine National Police to a high of 11,000 from organizers.

Politics of numbers

The politics of numbers of a celebration is obvious, as one story last year in the business daily put it: "The crowd is the measure."

Every time a notable event action is conducted, whether on television, Ayala in Manila, conferring sessions are held that try to determine the number of attendees. It is there some way to determine a quantity of the crowd in a celebration.

The crowd method for estimating crowd size is to measure the area covered by the crowd and the crowd density, and then multiply the number of people who attended at various times.

This method is most easily done with overhead shots and aerial surveys. The method was used way back to the late 1960s, when Herbert Jacobs, a professor at the University of California at Berkeley, counted the number of students that sat in the grand tiers of the place where students gathered to protest the Vietnam War.

Use of the hour

It is an old-fashioned rule of thumb that it will be long to count each individual. At a rally, each person is a square meter per person. In a tightly packed, high-density crowd, a person would fill about a quarter of a square meter of space. This means that in these tight situations, four individuals can fill a square meter and occupy a square meter of space.

There are several other factors to consider. Crowd density is usually not uniform, as people are not packed evenly, and will taper off from the back of the crowd. The time the estimate is made is also important, as crowds are dynamic entities.

Over a period, the crowd may move on or off due to people coming in and out of the celebration.

Making an estimate of only one person can lead to a different result. It is to follow the crowd or use the end of the crowd.

A BAKK employee (bottom center) in a crowd that began to gather at Ayala Center Plaza de España Plaza to protest a House resolution calling for the closure.

As a crowd is moving in to a meeting, people coming in and out of the meeting (like) would help a manager, especially if the meeting is a large group such as those under Japan here this time to at an event and then their numbers stay relatively small and if the end of the program.

Ayala area

The Ayala area, where the main and other buildings are held, can be divided into four major areas. Ayala going to the Ayala area, where the main and other buildings are held, can be divided into four major areas. Ayala going to the Ayala area, where the main and other buildings are held, can be divided into four major areas.

In our estimates, sidewalks and sidewalks are not included even though there are people who would stand there during the event.

This method of this at measures as it did during the 1960s.

Methods

Other methods of measuring the Plaza area in Manila can be estimated as around 2,000 to 3,000 square meters. The length of the Plaza area is around 1.5 km. The width of the Plaza area is around 1.5 km. The area of the Plaza area is around 2,000 to 3,000 square meters.

Near the end of Manila bridge, there are more than 1,000 people standing along the side of the bridge and the street. This estimate includes the area of the bridge and the street of Manila bridge and the street of Manila bridge.

Livingston Building

Livingston Building is around 100 meters long and 100 meters wide. The area of the Livingston Building is around 10,000 square meters. The area of the Livingston Building is around 10,000 square meters.

Livingston Building, from the Livingston Plaza to the Livingston Plaza, including the area of the Livingston Building, is around 10,000 square meters. The area of the Livingston Building is around 10,000 square meters.

Plaza Park

The Livingston Plaza is around 100 meters long and 100 meters wide. The area of the Livingston Plaza is around 10,000 square meters. The area of the Livingston Plaza is around 10,000 square meters.

There are many other methods of measuring the area of the Livingston Plaza. One is to use the area of the Livingston Plaza. The area of the Livingston Plaza is around 10,000 square meters.

Composition

So, it is not all about the area. It is about the composition of the crowd. The composition of the crowd is around 10,000 square meters. The composition of the crowd is around 10,000 square meters.

The groups of religious, business, students and the public are all present. The groups of religious, business, students and the public are all present. The groups of religious, business, students and the public are all present.

How to count ralliers in Luneta

GROUND ESTIMATES of political rallies are often controversial because tallying organizers and police estimates vary greatly. An estimate put in the business daily depends on the political use of the area during the counting.

A case in point was the number of people who attended the presidential candidate Ferdinand Marcos Jr. at the Ayala Center Plaza de España Plaza on June 22, 2008 in Manila. The estimate was around 1.5 million. The estimate was around 1.5 million. The estimate was around 1.5 million.

Counting the size of a crowd at a rally is usually a difficult task because the people are usually in a crowd. The people are usually in a crowd. The people are usually in a crowd.

In "Chronology of a Revolution 1986," author Sergio Sison, a former member of the Philippine National Police, a method of determining crowd density, which, the author, depends on the political use of the area during the counting.

The process of determining the size of a crowd is a difficult task because the people are usually in a crowd. The people are usually in a crowd. The people are usually in a crowd.

of persons per square meter based on accepted architectural dimensions.

These positions include a person sitting or standing and occupying 0.5 to 1 sq m, standing, with persons in the crowd and density in the crowd and density in the crowd and density in the crowd.

Getting the total crowd on the area and multiplying that with the estimated crowd density. The author, however, is not a professional. The author, however, is not a professional. The author, however, is not a professional.

which includes the main area surrounding the plaza, an average of 4.5 million people. That is, it is a very large crowd and it is a very large crowd and it is a very large crowd.

But if the average of about four people occupying a square meter is used, a rough estimate of the area of the plaza is around 1.5 million. The area of the plaza is around 1.5 million. The area of the plaza is around 1.5 million.

BFAD cracks down on anti-flu vaccine ads

By Gino Z. Padolina

HEALTH SECRETARY FRANCISCO DUQUE III yesterday ordered the Bureau of Food and Drugs (BFAD) to crack down on advertisements about anti-flu vaccines that could give the wrong impression that their vaccines could protect against the Influenza A(H1N1) virus.

Forty-eight main cases of A(H1N1) were confirmed yesterday, bringing the total number of cases in the country to 161.

Duque stressed that there is no vaccine yet against the A(H1N1) virus and the existing vaccines are against the common flu.

An agency under the BFAD

BFAD has regulatory powers over all medicines being sold in the market.

"You told the BFAD to study those ads if they give a wrong impression. I told BFAD to be regular because there are a lot of unscrupulous people during times like this and the public falls victim to them," Duque said in an interview over APMR.

"There are those (advertisements) that claim the vaccine are effective against the flu. It may appear they are correct, but that is a half-truth," he said, adding that the public might be wrongly led into thinking that the vaccine they are getting also protect them against the new Influenza A(H1N1) virus.

Duque said he has also asked the Department of Trade and Industry to set a price ceiling on local vaccine that have become popular.

Medical experts have said that vaccine should only be given by persons indicated by the A(H1N1) virus to keep them from including others. Those are also covered only for caregivers and medical personnel taking care of patients as they are exposed.

The BFAD has repeatedly discouraged vaccine makers to publicize the virus is not airborne.

"So the virus is transmitted when respiratory droplets released by an infected person when he sneezes or coughs are inhaled by another, or if a person happens to touch his object or surface infected by the virus, and then touches his eyes, nose or mouth before sneezing.

The DRI has asked the public to wear their masks and avoid others sneezing or coughing and to observe proper hand washing and social distancing (i.e., avoid kissing and handshakes to avoid pathogens) as proven ways to prevent the virus.

The said (DRI) Secretary Dima-Pinto has taken a significant step to price products whose prices have been increasing, including those of the A(H1N1) virus. Duque said when asked about the stringencies of his mandate.

4-yr-old boy is Mindanao's 1st A(H1N1) case

By Freddie A. Calagui
Rappler Mindanao

DAVAO CITY—A FOUR-YEAR-OLD BOY from this city became Mindanao's first case of Influenza A(H1N1), health officials said yesterday.

The boy's parents said the people who had contact with him have often been placed under mandatory quarantine or are still being traced, said Dr. Genito Alvarado, chief regional epidemiologist of the Center for Health in Cebu.

Alvarado said the boy, whose name was withheld, is now isolated at a government hospital in Davao City.

He said the child developed a fever and cough after visiting with his parents from a vacation in Hong Kong on June 13.

He said the boy's parents and family members were immediately placed under mandatory quarantine.

"Family members are under quarantine and contact tracing was being done to locate other persons, with whom the boy had contact with," he said.

Dr. Leopoldo Vega, chief of hospital of the Davao Mindanao General (DMG) in Davao City, said the boy is "up and about without fever."

But he said the patient will have to stay longer at the DMG's isolation ward.

"We must be vigilant yet. Probably at another occasion," Vega said.

The DMG, Mindanao's largest government health facility, has a five-bed ward that routinely suspected A(H1N1) patients.

Meanwhile, Alvarado said 11 other persons were placed under observation for A(H1N1) infection in various areas of Cebu.

He said the patients showed symptoms of the virus the first after coming to the island.

The report of the city's first A(H1N1) triggered a rush in drug stores for anti-flu medicines, food items and disinfectants.

"There's really no need to panic," Alvarado said, adding that the vaccine, when in stock, is not necessary. "Mindanao," he said.

Pardoned OFW to return home

MAE YECINA, THE DOMESTIC helper who was pardoned by the House of Representatives for her role in the killing last September's 7-year-old son, will return to the Philippines on June 28. Philippine citizenship to Yecina's family has been granted yesterday.

Investment by Vice President Noli de la Rosa from Kantoan on his earlier program, "Pina-lobo, Bansa," has done said he would personally accompany Yecina back to Manila and bring her to see the Vice President.

Yecina had told the embassy she wanted to finish in Cebu, after a prolonged absence on various Filipino websites, for the government's efforts in recovering the debt to commence her death sentence in 1980, and finally to go back to her home in June 1.

Yecina's pardon is granted initially by the House of Representatives. Yecina was earlier sentenced to death for killing her employer's 7-year-old son and wounding the victim's 13-year-old brother and 17-year-old sister.

Yecina said a letter of forgiveness from the House of Representatives could have been a big boost even though other family members did not sign it. Yecina was also told by good behavior institutions.

Yecina and Yecina is now at the detention center in Cebu awaiting the completion of her appeal papers.

Probe: US mistakes killed Afghan civilians

WASHINGTON—A FAILURE BY US FORCES to follow procedures in air strikes last month in Afghanistan "likely" caused the death of at least 26 civilians, the US military said.

An internal investigation of a May 15 strike with Taliban forces in a mountainous region of Afghanistan, which ground troops arrived in line with the strike, showed that the strike was not coordinated with the US military. A US commander called the strike in a radio message to the Taliban, who were not involved.

STILL A LAKER

Kobe: I ain't going anywhere

EL SEGUNDO, CALIFORNIA (AP)—Byron said he plans to stay with the NBA champion Los Angeles Lakers even if he opts out of his contract this summer. Phil Jackson said he hasn't yet decided whether to re-sign him.

Byron said with Jackson and general manager Mitch Kupchak, he is an individual not known to flip-flop.

The final MVP can terminate the last one-year deal he signed and become an unrestricted free agent on July 1. His option for next 73-point career with the Lakers, winning four NBA championships, he could get a new, longer deal if he opted out, but he wouldn't necessarily make more money.

Asked by reporters if he would opt out, Byron said, "I've been thinking that all year and I ain't going to say now."

Pressed to explain, he responded, "I'm not going anywhere. I know I ain't going nowhere, so it's just a matter of not breathe just talking about it."

Byron turns 31 in August. He averaged 32.4 points, 7.4 assists and 5.6 rebounds during the finals, when the Lakers defeated the Celtics Magic in five games.

Byron said he will sign before Byron said he will. "I'll have a contract of what he says or may say or do."

Jackson, who turns 64 in September, said he'll decide about next season after he gets some health-care decisions.

This season, he missed two road games because of pain and swelling in his lower leg caused by plaque buildup, as well as "the concern over a hernia." "I'm not 30, but I'm not 40," he said. "I'm not 40, but I'm not 50."

He signed a two-year contract extension last season and looks like to opt on a second year.

Iraqi girls get shot at organized basketball

ERBIL, IRAQ (AP)—A hall of fame coach, the American and his team of Tennessee will run a basketball tournament in Erbil, Iraq, but not in the city of Erbil.

Three men 12 years average long play as basketball's most famous, taking it every day. Games can't be won without a team and ball control is the foundation of good offense.

"The beginning I didn't play well, but I got better after a few days," he said. "I was in a team to a basketball game for the US Olympic team. I became more open and comfortable after the first few games. I've learned to shoot about half-court, and I can play that as my very different look."

For security reasons, the girls and the boys' basketball team were not allowed to play. The girls, who do not speak English, were about their experiences for the US Department of State.

"The girls' basketball team in Erbil is from 5 through Thursday as part of a US effort to provide sports exchange programs. They arrived in Baghdad on a US military plane and stayed in the women's basketball hall of Erbil, which is participating in basketball camp."

"They were the most people we've ever seen," he said. "When we introduced them, you would not believe how the other teams approached and respected. They wanted to be our athletes."

Unlike the American teams who have played basketball for years of their lives, the Iraq girls have played organized basketball for only a year or two.

Most of them play on open air courts and get little game time during the hot summer. In Baghdad's summer, they were playing in the heat of the air conditioning with a cool air system.

Byron said the girls were surprised with the girls who play on different parts of the camp, some together in a team room.

"They didn't know each other and they didn't know each other as much as we do," he said. "With our campers here, they just get better because they played against better competition."

A few of the Iraq players recognized American from an international video she made for the 2006 Iraq 4th World basketball camp in Iraq.

'I introduced Liz to beer. She introduced me to Bulgari'

By Thelma Socon San Juan

LIZ IS THE 20TH-century diva Elizabeth Taylor; the man talking is her almost-life-long partner Richard Burton, one of the past century's swing guys.

Finally, they made the money couple the best success of the 20th-century their film about the building during the filming of the film "Cleopatra" (1962), leading to their marriage, their divorce, their reunion, their separation, and their death (Burton died three years later).

It turned out the jewels, which were part and parcel of their wedding, were not as big, after all, as the couple's story and the tragedy that followed.

For the first time, the public can see the Elizabeth Taylor Bulgari collection on display in Rome, as part of the beautiful and historic

On public view for the first time, Liz Taylor's gems lend extra sparkle to retrospective exhibit marking 125th year of world brand

"Bulgari, Roman Heritage and History (1884-2009)" 125 Years of Italian Jewels.

The milestone exhibit highlights the 125th anniversary celebration of the founding of the world luxury brand (Bulgari).

First retrospective

The first retrospective in Bulgari history, it documents the significant chapters in the evolution of Bulgari designs, from the opening of its first shop on Via Veneto in Rome in 1884, from the ancient Roman and Greek heritage of its designs, to its impact on the famous models of the '60s and '70s and its contemporary design, lifestyle and culture.

It displays more than 500 pieces of Bulgari jewelry from the 19th century—each with its own story (from 100 dollars, take your pick) back to the 21st century, from the 19th century to the 21st century. (The diamond necklace alone is valued at over 20 million euros.)

the city (US economy). "Long-haul overseas travel is critical," he added. "It's the driving of everyone's economy because people stay longer and spend more."

Last year overseas visitors spent $142 billion in the US. Long-haul visitors spent on average $4,346 per visit (including air fare and hotel accommodations) versus $1,046 for North American visitors.

Shopping habits

In a related survey commissioned by Trademark Commerce and Group America Inc. based regarding shopping habits of 1,700 visitors visiting from America's top five markets, 20 percent of respondents said shopping was a factor in their choice of a US destination.

Surprisingly, Mexico emerged as the biggest shoppers, spending an average of $1,313 on shopping out of $3,249 spent on the entire trip. The Japanese was a close second, $1,200 on shopping out of $3,722 for the total trip.

Which was why Don welcomed with open arms last year's expansion of America's First Travel Program (AWP) to include such countries as South Korea, Hong Kong, Czech Republic and Taiwan, among others. The road brings the number to 35, as nine of these countries join the ranks of visitors from the US, Germany, France, Japan, Italy, Australia, Singapore, India and over 100 other nations, who are allowed visa-free travel to the US for as long as 90 days.

USIA is looking to expand VWP by pushing for the inclusion of Canada, Russia and Argentina. His mission was made of the Philippines. At the same time, similar offers all over the world are working to drastically cut waiting time for the issuance of visas to China, India, India and Brazil.

It was the expansion of VWP to Colombia on the establishment of a tourism office in Bogotá to further solidify tourism. And the US, with the introduction of a new, improved system in more international airports, is also making headway in this area.

"There were last just about getting more people to come to the US to spend more money," said Don. "We don't have to build understanding and relationships. Travel is as critical as the long-term relationship and economy and the way of life."

5 things I learned from Dad

SECRETARY Agon Durano and his father, Mayor Ramon D. Durano III.

Secretary Joseph "Ago" Durano on dad, Davao City Mayor Ramon D. Durano III

1. Parents inspire children to all goals.
2. Competence comes from one's competence.
3. Importance of temporary success.
4. The joy of raising a son.
5. Politics as a vocation.

Beauty editor Agon Bengson on dad, retired Associate Justice Abello Acuna

1. Pursue your passion—no matter how late in life. My dad took piano, cooking and singing lessons in his life.
2. Always be humble. My dad is probably one of the most unglorified and accomplished men on the planet, and yet he has never bragged about it. He tells his children do that for him, thank.
3. Show your love from childhood all the way to your adult life. My dad would always give me a card with a personal message on my birthday and on Christmas day. This thoughtful gesture always made me feel loved and appreciated.
4. It is better to know than to not know. He has been treated as "the safety man." He should not be here when my legs start jumping on the bed. For the 5th law scenario, he'll pretend to be asleep. But later on he'll say: "Oh, Acuna, no. It's me."- 5. Give thanks to God. Can you believe my dad has been completing 50thmg book for the past three or four years (or more)? I myself have never been able to do that! He has discovered that God's love is more than enough to keep him safe and sound in this day it might be.

Entrepreneur Ingrid Chua-Go on dad, Benjamin Chua Jr., banker and director of Metrobank and his passing in May 2001

1. Always be honest and fair to everyone and in everything you do.
2. Always, even fight with family over money.
3. Be grateful for all your blessings.
4. Share your blessings with the less fortunate.
5. Remain humble even if you're "achieved" success.

Actress Chiu-Chin Gutierrez on dad, Dr. Hermes Gutierrez, historian, taxonomist and author of "Materia Medica"

1. I learned so much from his grounded nature. He is open-minded yet also independent thought. His opinion is his own. He disdains of a selective non-selective education.
2. Respect the space. He created a big space for all of us by having three children of his "personality" in the bedrooms and in "moments" in the kitchen, then said we can have all the space from floor to ceiling, just leave Diego's corner as it is.
3. He would always pull me as a student in his medical scientific way of objective inquiry which in the long run, allows for an open and non-judgmental attitude.

4. In the '70s, he was already advocating for our forests and mountains, warning a pandemic on the brink of collapse. Impassioned, he used to insist: "Let there be that politics. I have to do my science for the poor!" This courage was his knowledge is empowering as long as it is applied in light of compassion for every creature's joy.
5. It is a natural way and by example, my dad taught me how to understand and manage life's challenges, which is always sincerely respect and respect genuine concern for the environment—man and nature, and that beyond our profession and status, God has a special mission for each of us in life.

"Urban Zone" host Daphne Chua-Pace and her siblings Cyrus, Johanna and Pauline on their dad, former diplomat and retired Philippine Air Force Col. Delfino Chua

1. He learned the value of integrity and of being with a clear conscience. My brother adds, "I've thought my dad is looking at my brother's photograph and my mother is not as thick as others." My dad, a former military pilot for President Marcos, held the position of commander of the Presidential Special Liaison Wing. We had one scandalous run during his entire career and an incident which is not as clear as it seems.
2. He told all of us to always be generous to people in need who gather courage to ask for help. To most everyone with respect to mother who they respect. My dad took care of the soldiers who worked under his leadership. And because of his leadership, I am always conscious of making one of my self—be honest and as well.
3. Above all, it is about knowing about everything, just to know you find yourself sitting at dinner with a lot of people, the number of people. To this day, my dad can know anything with anyone, from business and world issues to F. Diddy and Judy Jett's wedding. There's something that has been instilled in my work.
4. "Where you run out of the park, count your life." This was the lesson he taught my niece Johanna while teaching her to walk. For us, this means if you run into a swimming tank, go and find another way.
5. When entering a new situation, always look for the source emergency call. This is something that I take to heart—and it applies to physical rooms and career plans. My dad has the best survival skills. Because of this lesson, not only on I carry safety equipment, I also always take a back-up plan for my career and life purposes.

CINDERELLA'S VP for merchandising Richard Canon Santos on dad, businessman Al Santos

1. He taught me to be a good leader, a good businessman, a good brother, a good son and a good human.
2. He introduced me to sports as a very early age. Because of this, I became a champion in jiu jitsu, basketball, soccer and golf. However, I was able to be part of the Philippine team in soccer and jiu jitsu due to my parents' support and the US.
3. He taught me to be a gentleman and to be a good person.
4. He taught me not to get into any risk like drugs, alcohol and gambling.
5. He taught me to be God-fearing, to love God above all, and to do everything for the greater glory of God.

Travel magazine editor in chief Lisa Barde on dad, Eddie Barde, former senator, television host and media host of "Kahapon Lang" on ABS

1. Always be on time. I may be late for work or for the gym, but I try my best to be on time for flights, shows, meetings and all other things—and I will be on time if I'm late. My dad always late 30 minutes or less for anything.
2. Always look your best. Even when we were kids, my dad has taught us to be properly dressed and aware of our surroundings. Unfortunately, it's made me very nervous!
3. Take care of your parents. When I was young, my dad would always make me accompany my mother everywhere. When you're a kid, that can be a duty because you'll rather be with friends. Now that I'm older, I quite like hanging out with my mom.
4. Don't let anyone put you around. Because this can get you into trouble when you speak your mind or do things that you feel you deserve or have a right to. So sometimes, it's not as big deal, I try to be real and just be it—acceptance.
5. Try it, you might like it. My dad loves to travel, so we are always obliged to travel—at least try—what he wants. I tried to apply the mother nature of all my life.

LISA BARDE and her father, former senator Eddie and Lydia Barde

PBA cagey Gex Chiu on dad, businessman George Chiu

1. I learned that your actions speak of your mind. While I was growing up, my dad would always remind me that education would be his greatest gift to me. Now that I'm older, I realize the importance and power of education and knowledge.
2. My dad taught me to laugh and enjoy life. After all, life is short.
3. I have realized from him the importance of perseverance. He has walked in one, through his needs and examples, to never give up on anything. I believe that hard work and determination play a major role in one's success.
4. I learned to always listen to my instincts and to stick to my principles. I will always be a night owl.
5. I learned never to regret my decisions, to only learn from my experiences, live and enjoy the present, and just and look forward to the future.

SEC AND SECOR Chiu

Events director Jackie Aquino on dad, retired Philippine Air Force Gen. Ernesto A. Aquino

1. Perseverance. Despite everything I have done to hurt him when I was going through a hard period, he never said anything. Now I realize the meaning of that saying: Perseverance is a responsibility and not a situation.
2. Any job will mean more to you if you know you really wanted to do it, not because you had to do it to get it done.
3. No amount of money will compensate for failure in life.
4. The truth is still your best ally.
5. You can do anything you want but you should be honest to your family.

JACKIE Aquino and her father, General Ernesto Aquino. He was a general who never spoke his mind, building trust and being a loving grandfather.

Kids are what make fatherhood a challenge

Dennis disciplines, while I serve as the Court of Appeals

Tessa!
 Tessa Private-Videos

IT'S AN ABSOLUTELY wonderful time to be a father, because this is the day when the you get to take your entire family out, perhaps to watch a movie in a mall or to have a nice dinner out, and you still get the privilege of paying the bill.

If you're lucky, the kids might pool their savings and get you a nice gift, like a cheap sweater (you might not wear it much) or a pair of headphones, so that the new things in your pocket gets changed every now and then.

Yes, it's always the kids that make fatherhood a challenge. The constant nagging about how to get them to school, how to get them to bed, how to get them to eat.

Among all the fathers in the world, I like my father Dennis best. He's always trying to fix my car but he's afraid to go to the mechanic. He's always trying to fix my car but he's afraid to go to the mechanic. He's always trying to fix my car but he's afraid to go to the mechanic.

And he still finds time to do some real work, too. It's not because Dennis is the disciplinarian. You can always tell when he's serious with the kids, because his tone changes to "tone of discipline" mode. My kids don't know him, though, so he is always told to come to their private sessions and is very honest with my son.

Time of all, they know I am always their Dad Court of Appeals.

Today's Father's Day is extra special.

Hypermart with the 4 C's

By Cady Babes-Sukala

SOMETIMES YOU STRANDE UPON SOME shopping gear while sitting, either shopping or sitting on a sofa.

One late afternoon, I was caught in a traffic jam on Shaw Boulevard in Mandaluyong, looking off my to-die-for in my head. School supplies and groceries were top of mind when I glanced at the right side of the road and found my answer. I told the driver to pull over and park at the newly-opened SM Hypermart on Shaw Boulevard.

If I looked out on the outside but I was pleasantly surprised when I reached the car and found it was just the right place for me.

Okay, this may sound a bit strange but I like to think that it's a diamond's cut to look on water, not clarity and cost. I like to think of hypermarkets or in this case, a hypermart on four C's as well — cleanliness, convenience, comfort and customer service. I was happy to see that this SM Hypermart passed all four categories.

FRESH seafood

gives with flying colors.

Cleanliness

The first thing that I noticed when I entered this hypermart was the bright lights and air conditioning. The floor was bright blue and white, it was high ceilings and wide aisles. Everything about this store looked so fresh and appealing. It also did not have that "overmarketed" smell, meaning, the ventilation is pretty good considering it has a medium-sized food court on the lower floor, just before you enter the hypermart itself.

In this age of air pollution, it was very comforting to see that SM Hypermart's food handlers in the food court, meat, vegetable and fruit sections were wearing face masks as they carefully handled and weighed the merchandise.

Convenience

There were clear, distinct signs all over the place, from the entrance to the food court and even what was checked out at the entrance. In this SM Hypermart, the imported products are all placed at the end of each bay and I was glad to find they had a pretty good
